Blitzed Bottle Babies

Suffer From Shortage

LONDON—Baby perambulators rank as first priority war relief in the Lancashire town of Bingley. So acute is the shortage that $2,400 donated by the British War Relief Society of America after the town was blitzed was completely used up purchasing 100 prams, which now are being sold to mothers.

"We had to restrict them to mothers of three or more children because of the great demand," Mrs. E. H. Smith, chairman of the Bingley maternity child welfare committee, said. The committee is trying to purchase more prams, but manufacturers say they are unavailable, she added.

Dr. P. T. Wood, Bingley medical officer, suggests that the present system, whereby doctors and midwives issue certificates to enable mothers and expectant mothers to obtain extra milk and eggs, should be extended to perambulators.

Indian Get Sulfa and

Medicine Man In Progress

FORT HALL, IDAHO—Through made by the federal government in furnishing medical care for its Indian wards in the last 15 years has been amazing," says Superintendent C. L. Graves of the Fort Hall reservation.

He said that sulfa drugs have been "a godsend for our Indians." "Sulfa has been the means of practically eliminating the scourge of tuberculosis," Graves said. It is marked how the Indians have drifted away from their ancient rituals for healing the sick.

MALDEN, MO.—Jim Smith, of Malden, Mo., acquired a variety of cuts and gashes in his work at the Malden army air field mess hall.

His superior officer looked into Smith's file to see whether the sergeant was properly classified. He's still wondering.

Nervous Cases Are

Aided by Activity

Third of War Casualties Due To Breakdowns.

WASHINGTON—Activity is often a very effective medicine.

This is accepted generally by army doctors at Walter Reed hospital, where there are elaborate facilities for occupational therapy, physical therapy and hydro-therapy. Nearly one-third of the casualties are in this category, because only the wounded who will be out of action for long periods are repatriated.

The mental and nervous cases are among soldiers unable to stand the strains incident to modern mechanized warfare.

Under modern treatment there is encouraging progress in repairing the damaged nervous system. One of the best means of treatment is occupational therapy. There are two types, diversional and curative. The patient realizes he is accomplishing something his progress is rapid. It is partly a matter of restoring his confidence.

Occupational therapy is employed not only for the mental but for the physical cases who have been badly wounded and must be taught how to use their limbs again. Psychological as well as physical factors enter in their cases.

A gymnasium is provided for patients who have forgotten how to use their limbs. There are weight-pulling machines, rowing apparatus and other contrivances.

Painting exercises must be employed to teach patients how to manipulate artificial limbs. They use wholly different muscles than persons who have not lost their limbs.

U. S. Troops Use Shovels

To Fish at Amchitka

SAN FRANCISCO—The army's landed in a fisherman's paradise—Amchitka—last night. The soldiers don't like fishing tackle.

Gregory Reeser, coast guardman from Cincinnati who was on the first army transport to land men on that Aleutian outpost, discovered the men had a fair substitute, though, until friends in the States get them hooked up to them.

"They just use shovels. They actually scoop fish out of the streams that's how plentiful they are."

They Hate to Get Up;

Missing Bugle Is Back

KEESLER FIELD, MISS.—A bugle mysteriously missing for two days was recovered last night after the company topkick posted a notice on a bulletin board.

The notice announced that all men would stand reveille one hour earlier every morning until the company bugle was found.

Football Game

Here Friday

Afternoon

Dear citizens of Appomattox,

You are backing your husbands, brothers and your boys in the service and doing a grand job, too, but remember these fellows here at home. Some of the fellows that are still with us are still going to high school. Let's all come to Appomattox high school on Friday, October 8, 1943, to see these boys play a great game of football against an old opponent, Farmville high school.

On the 24th of September Farmville defeated Appomattox by one touchdown. Come on up and let these boys know that the people are interested in them. Come and root for them. We have a real treat this year and promise a thrilling game. The game starts at 2:30 P. M., Friday, October 8, on the high school play grounds. A hat will be passed around, so try to bring at least a dime. The team had rather play for a crowd than an empty stand. Come and back the team.
